

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A power controller for a computer system capable of supporting multiple processor types. The power controller receives a voltage identification signal from the microprocessor and a microprocessor selection signal from a motherboard to provide a 5 correct voltage specification signal and terminal voltage to the microprocessor. The invention also provides voltage specification signals and terminal voltages to the motherboard of a computer system that can support a multiple of processor types.